REASON FOR DESIGNATION

The John Douglas Cottage, built as a rental unit for the merchant craftsman class, is significant as one of the best examples of a Regency style brick cottage in Peterborough. Constructed in the 1860's, it is the centre cottage of three very similar small Regency cottages built by John Thomas Douglas.

The John Douglas Cottage is the best-preserved example of these three cottages, having retained its original windows and sidelights, and a unique Tudor-esque stained glass transom. Over the years, the house has been occupied by merchants and skilled tradesmen, several of whom have worked at Peterborough industrial institutions such as Quaker Oats and General Electric.
